Got a Commercial Real Estate Question? “Ask Michael Bull”

ATLANTA (Jan. 7, 2014) – Have a question about any aspect of commercial real estate? Michael Bull, a widely recognized industry expert and host of the nationally syndicated “Commercial Real Estate Show” radio program, is ready to answer it.

“Ask Michael Bull” is a new video series produced by Bull and the “Commercial Real Estate Show.” Each business day, in a short video, Bull answers a question submitted by the public, show listeners, clients or the press. The videos are posted on the Commercial Real Estate Show YouTube channel.

The questions cover beginner to advanced topics. Sample questions already answered in the series include: Is earnest money required in a commercial contract? How soon before lease expiration should my company consider options? Do I need an appraisal to sell my property? How can I defer taxes and still pull out cash in a 1031 exchange?

“As the economy and commercial real estate markets continue to recover, business owners and investors are becoming more interested in the industry,” said Bull, also the founder and president of Bull Realty. “This new video series provides valuable insight and knowledge into commercial real estate’s intricacies. It’s also an opportunity for industry veterans to get my take on their questions.”

Questions can be submitted by calling 888-612-SHOW (7469), emailing info@CREShow.com or via Twitter by using the hashtag #AskMB. For easy access to the video library and new videos, follow @AskMichaelBull on Twitter and subscribe to the Commercial Real Estate Show YouTube channel.

The show is also downloaded more than 22,000 times a week on iTunes and is carried on The Liberty Express network and the show’s website, www.CREshow.com.
